

Queenscliff Lonsdale Yacht Club...

The working bee at QLYC – just another Sunday morning!

- Sun November 10, 2013

A good morning's work organising the property and managing all our members vessels!!

A quick meeting of our committee and then it was onto other matters in a working bee to change the way our yard looks and is managed.

Over 30 members and friends turned up to take on the job of putting in place a plan by the committee on how our OTB boats will be managed and secured as they sit in the yard.

In preparation Ross and Jennifer had organised to obtain all the materials for the day and had them delivered to the shed as well as making a plan for execution on the day!

All owners had been notified and assisted with keys and ability to move all the equipment around before works began The boats shifted from the works area....and work begins!!

Honorary Life Member Bob Mayne wields the crow bar whilst Tudor bends the back...but many hands make light work with other members also giving their tools a good work out!!

Peter and Colin working on one hole placement whilst behind, Dave and Ian debate the outcome of the hole being augured by Russ....

And then of course the place started to resemble the plans...with the aptly named 'Pile Moorings' taking form as QLYC puts its own mooring plan into operation...!!

There were a few workers having a mid project break from their shovels to have critical discussions about the height

...with Patrick awaiting the judges final decision from Barry, Dave and JB !!

But then it was immediately back into it for a great end result . . .

The moorings look fantastic as the vessels start to be man handled back into place and re-secured for owners both known and unknown!

And then it was the BBQ that got everybody's attention as food and a quiet drink or two, took the place of shovels, crow bars, mattocks and other items...

As the sun came out the workers spread themselves around enjoying the real serenity that is QLYC on a Sunday arvo...thanks to everyone for a great effort and well earned break ... but more importantly the organised boat and yard looks magnificent!

AND a late announcement from the committee

Next week's race will be the Swan Island Picnic Race to McDonald's Jetty with the usual briefing at Noon in the harbour....

The big yachts will be competing in the QCYC Goorangai Trophy race from Brighton to Queenscliff ...

In the meantime....Many thanks to all....
From Commodore Jill...(AND the Grub!)
